Burners Referee Magic Items

Referee only. Who an enchanted armament accepts, and what that means, is in [[Burners Adventure Game#Enchanted Arms and Armor]]. This page is how you stock it, convert it, and run it.

Enchanted = legendary = eldritch = magic. Same class. A +1 sword is a freaking magic sword — woke steel that may talk, burn, or hunt. The plus only sets how many minor powers you stock, not how trivial the find is.

In combat, an enchanted arm or armor the wielder's Trait has accepted gives one free die each round, rolled when it is used: a weapon's on a blow, a shield's or armor's on a Defend. It is not Fuel and doesn't count for Initiative; unused by the next Roll Initiative, it's gone. Out of combat they give no extra dice. Powers also require that acceptance (and that the power has been found). Without the Trait the piece is mundane kit in their hands. A module +n means n minor powers, not a bigger number on the roll.

Quality above fine steel

Mundane quality — Common, Fine steel, Signature — lives in [[Burners Arms and Armor]]. These rungs are magical (or magic-adjacent) and live only here:

Tuned

Fitted to one grip and dialed in. A Tuned weapon counts as enchanted for that grip (accepted only with the Trait; free die and powers once found) and is Trusty (never sticks or notches). A tuning belongs to one hand: a blade tuned to a dead man's grip must be re-tuned before it answers you (a master's fee, or your own Craft 1+, tools, coin, and downtime). Earned in play, never at creation.

Bane-forged

Made for one enemy. Against its named quarry it is the right tool — no fiction claim needed; the wielder may burn the extra Fuel into every on-quarry blow. This is where module "+1, +3 vs. dragons" goes — as a power on enchanted steel, not a bigger number.

Legendary / named relics

Found, never made. A relic may lie dormant as ordinary gear until you discover its true name — read from a tomb-glyph, surrendered by an Invocation to the patron it serves, or earned by the deed it was made for. The name costs no XP. With the matching Trait you are accepted (free die and powers once found).

Named relics and true names matter for fiction and for waking a dormant piece; they do not make a second mechanical tier above "enchanted." Enchanted, legendary, and eldritch are one class.

About one in six relics speaks. These are Sentient Items, each a bound soul with its own will and powers that can aid, argue, or betray you. Many more were once sentient but broke over the long ages, most of them mad and silent. A mute relic in your hands is not safely empty; it may be inert, or a madness too far gone for words. Sentience is a layer on enchanted kit, not a milder find — the Trait still gates acceptance; ego and speech sit on top (no Oracle roll to "accept"; the Trait is the gate, as with any enchanted arm).

+n → powers

When a module lists a +1 sword, +2 shield, +1 plate, and so on — convert in two parts. Keep Slots, AC, and size as the mundane piece would be.

1. Enchanted. The item is enchanted — a magic sword (or shield, or harness), full stop. Acceptance wants the fitting Trait; without it the enchantment is quiet (see [[Burners Adventure Game#Enchanted Arms and Armor]]).

2. Special powers — one per plus. A +1 item has one +1-tier power. A +2 adds a second, +2-tier power. A +3 adds a third, and so on. Powers are minor — convenience, flavor, situational edges — not extra dice on every blow.

Tier	Scope
+1	Passive or once per fight — sensory tricks, light, faint Bane hints
+2	Once per session or a stronger passive — named sword powers (flaming, charm, locate), stronger Bane
+3+	Once per delve, or once in the campaign for the rarest edges — not wishes or energy drain

Record them like Trait Signatures: each power you have found earns an asterisk on the item line and a footnote. Until you find a power, leave the star off; the Referee knows what is waiting.

On your sheet	Meaning
`arming sword` (enchanted)	Magic steel; silent until you hold arming sword (or the fitting Trait) — then free die and powers as found
`arming sword*`	Accepted; one +1-tier power discovered — footnote * names it
`arming sword`	A +2 item; both powers found — footnotes * and **

No plusses on sums. A +n from another game never becomes a bonus added to a roll total. It becomes enchanted arms or armor: acceptance by Trait, the free die, plus n minor powers once found.

Disarming an enchanted weapon denies its magic while it is out of hand.

Shields and armor use the same ladder: a +2 heater is enchanted plus a +1-tier power and a +2-tier power; +1 chain is enchanted plus one +1-tier power. Do not raise AC or size for the plus — the powers carry the rest.

OSE conversion (magic arms)

Potions, rings, cursed items, and wondrous items port as written in [[Burners OSE Conversions]]. Magic arms, shields, and armor convert only by this page.

OSE treasure swords (SRD: Swords) layer three kinds of bonus:

1. The plus — attack and damage bonus → Burners enchanted (no to-hit).

2. Bane vs type — "+2 vs lycanthropes", "+3 vs undead" → a +1-tier or +2-tier power that is the right tool (or reads as silver) vs that quarry — not a bigger number.
3. Named power — flaming, light, locate objects, charm person, energy drain, wishes → assign to +1 / +2 / +3 tiers by potency (below).

Sentient swords (30% of magic swords; SRD: Sentient Swords) are a layer on enchanted kit, not a smaller find: roll INT, Ego, alignment, sensory and extraordinary powers, optional special purpose. Use that procedure when the module implies personality, control checks, or speech — and remember every +1 longsword is already magic steel that might one day speak. Convert enchanted + powers first (Trait acceptance); add INT/Ego and the sensory/extraordinary tables on top. There is no separate Oracle roll for acceptance — the kit Trait is the gate.

OSE armor and shields in treasure are usually plain +n with no second power (Treasures: Armour and Shields). Invent +1 / +2 powers from the suggestions below, or steal a sensory or protection theme from rings and cloaks in the same book.

Suggested powers by tier

Pick one per tier, or roll d12 on the column. Re-roll duplicates. Route OSE text directly when the module names the power (Sword +1, Flaming → take the +1-tier fire row and the +2-tier anti-troll/plant row as ∗ and ∗∗).

Module text cheat sheet

OSE says	Burners
Sword +1	Enchanted only, or enchanted + roll +1-tier
Sword +1, +3 vs Undead	Enchanted · ∗ Bane-hint undead · ∗∗ Bane-forged vs undead
Sword +1, Flaming	Enchanted · ∗ Light or fire-hint · ∗∗ Flaming
Sword +2	Enchanted · ∗ + ∗∗ (two rolls)
Sword +2, Charm Person	Enchanted · ∗ (roll) · ∗∗ Charm
Sword +3	Enchanted · three tiers (roll or design) — consider 2d6 relic
Shield/Armour +n	Enchanted · powers per n (shields/armor tables)

Sheet example — +2 arming sword, both powers found:

arming sword (2 slots, enchanted)
*  Hums near oath-breakers; reads as silver (right tool vs silver-weak, once/fight).
 Once per session, when a blow Sparks, bind the foe's weapon — no maneuver.

Worked example — +2 longsword in a chest: enchanted arming sword. Referee's margin: +1 power = hums near oath-breakers / silver-edge; +2 power = bind on Spark once per session. On the player's sheet after both are found: `arming sword` with footnotes ∗ and ∗∗ as above.

Named & strange steel (2d6)

Use enchanted + powers for anonymous module loot ("+1 sword"). Roll 2d6 when the text names the item, sets a special purpose ("+2, +3 vs dragons"), or reads like a relic — then layer powers from the +n on top of whatever rung the table gives. The further from 7, the stranger the steel beneath the enchantment:

2d6	The blade is…
2	A relic all along. Enchanted; dormant until its true name is learned.
3	Bane-forged against a foe fitting the module (the Referee names the quarry).
4	An unusual tag for its type — Control, Binding, Parrying, or Stabbity where its kind carries none.
5	Tuned — to a dead hand. Re-tune to wake it.

2d6	The blade is…
6	Signature — a name, a history, a hook. Fine steel beneath.
7	Fine steel, plain and true — Trusty, and it sells dear.
8	Signature.
9	Tuned — to a dead hand.
10	An unusual tag for its type.
11	Bane-forged.
12	A relic all along.

A +3 or better weapon in the text is the module telling you to skip the table: ask whether this one is a relic.

Rarity valve: convert only the interesting magic arms upward on the ladder. The anonymous +1 longsword in a chest is enchanted + one +1-tier power — no 2d6 roll required.

Mundane fine make on armor becomes a fitted Signature harness — comfortable, quiet, worth coin, never hinders. +n armor or shields never raise AC or size for the plus.
