

Burners Experience

You keep what you kill.

XP for treasure claimed and monsters overcome. The Referee keeps the totals.

Level up when your XP hits the next line on the table, the next time you wake after sleeping somewhere safe (town, inn, watched camp). Put one level in one Approach. Reroll HP (one d6 per character level) and keep the higher of the new total or old+1. See Approach Level and HP in [[Burners Adventure Game]].

Claiming the haul pays the XP. Coin in your purse is for spending — kit, drink, retainers. That is its own reward.

Level	XP	Eldar XP
1	0	0
2	2,000	4,000
3	4,000	8,000
4	8,000	16,000
5	16,000	32,000
6	32,000	64,000
7	64,000	128,000
8	120,000	240,000

Totals are cumulative.

Treasure. 1 XP per 1 gp when claimed — coin, gems, jewelry, goods, art. Not strips off a carcass (see Part out).

Monsters. When you overcome them — killed, routed, or otherwise put down. The Referee sets the XP.

No award. Magic items, keeps, ships, and the like — you got the thing. Monster parts (hide, tusks, pelts, ivory): may sell for gold or be useful as kit; never XP.

Eldar

[[Burners Ancestry|Eldar]] use the Eldar column (double XP). Two Signatures per character level instead of one, still earned in play. Ancestry is why those can be gifts a mortal cannot take (low light, charm, sleep, and so on).

Who gets a share

Per fight and per claim — not per game night.

- Monster: who was there when it went down. Left before, or walked up after: no cut.
- Treasure: who was there when it became party loot.

OSE base. Split that pot evenly among Burners and retainers on the job who are not Mustering. Each counts as one in the divisor. Non-Mustering retainers keep half of that share (OSE); throw the rest away. Do not put half-shares in the divisor.

Muster (Heart Boss). A key Boss benefit: bring Mustering retainers without taxing party XP. They are not in the divisor. After the Boss's share is set, Mustering retainers on that job take half of their Boss's XP, split evenly among them (round down). One Mustering retainer gets the whole half; three split it three ways. The Boss keeps their full share. See [[Burners Muster]].

Treasure pay is separate: living retainers expect a half-share of the coin. If the crew skips them, the Referee says so ([[Burners Muster]]).

Claimed treasure

No XP until the haul is party loot. One of these is enough:

1. Taken and named — “we take the coin bag, the caskets, the torc.”
2. Counted or asked — “how much is in it?”
3. Stowed as party loot — bag, mule, hireling, lock-up, inn room.

Leave it on the floor and it was never claimed. Asking the price later does not change who was there. What you do with the coin later does not change who earned the XP.

The Referee sets each find's gp once, now or later. Unknown gp does not block the claim.

Part out

You may strip a kill for salvage — hide, tusks, ivory, and so on. Some of it sells (the Referee sets the gp). Some of it is just useful — rope from sinew, a shield from shell, oil from blubber, a reagent in the sack. Either way: purse or kit, not XP. The fight already paid; cutting the carcass does not pay again.

Who tracks what

Referee. XP per Burner and retainer. Who was there for each fight and claim. Tell a player their total when they ask. After you describe a find, do not re-list the treasure for the players. Speak for retainers owed a cut.

Players. Track what you took, how you split or stowed it, and what you spent. Unlogged finds are not available to spend until you account for them.